ON EVIDENCE RULES

These rules govern proceedings in the courts of the United States and before the United States bankruptcy judges and United States magistrate judges, to the extent and with the exceptions stated in rule 1101	These rules apply to proceedings before United States courts. The specific courts and proceedings to which the rules apply, along with exceptions, are set out in Rule 1101

¹ The date of this version is May 15, 2008. It is the later of two versions dated May 15, 2008

Rule 102. Purpose and Construction	Rule 102 — Purpose
These rules shall be construed to secure fairness in administration, elimination of unjustifiable expense and delay, and promotion of growth and development of the law of evidence to the end that the truth may be ascertained and proceedings justly determined	These rules should be construed so as to administer every proceeding fairly, eliminate unjustifiable expense and delay, and promote the development of evidence law, to the end of ascertaining the truth and securing a just determination

Rule 103. Rulings on Evidence	Rule 103 — Rulings on Evidence
(a) Effect of erroneous ruling. Error may not be predicated upon a ruling which admits or excludes evidence unless a substantial right of the party is affected, and (1) Objection. In case the ruling is one admitting evidence, a timely objection or motion to strike appears of record, stating the specific ground of objection, if the specific ground was not apparent from the context, or (2) Offer of proof. In case the ruling is one excluding evidence, the substance of the evidence was made known to the court by offer or was apparent from the context within which questions were asked Once the court makes a definitive ruling on the record admitting or excluding evidence, either at or before trial, a party need not renew an objection or offer of proof to preserve a claim of error for appeal	(a) Preserving a Claim of Error. A party may claim error in a ruling to admit or exclude evidence only if the error affects a substantial right of the party and (1) if the ruling admits evidence, the party, on the record (A) timely objects or moves to strike, and (B) states the specific ground, unless it was apparent from the context, or (2) if the ruling excludes evidence, the party informs the court of its substance by an offer of proof, unless the substance was apparent from the context (b) Not Needing to Renew an Objection or Offer of Proof. Once the court rules definitively on the record — either before or at trial — a party need not renew an objection or offer of proof to preserve a claim of error for appeal
(b) Record of offer and ruling The court may add any other or further statement which shows the character of the evidence, the form in which it was offered, the objection made, and the ruling thereon. It may direct the making of an offer in question and answer form	(c) Court's Statements About the Ruling; Directing an Offer of Proof. The court may make any statement about the character or form of the evidence, the objection made, and the ruling. The court may direct that an offer of proof be made in question-and-answer form
(c) Hearing of jury. In jury cases, proceedings shall be conducted, to the extent practicable, so as to prevent inadmissible evidence from being suggested to the jury by any means, such as making statements or offers of proof or asking questions in the hearing of the jury	(d) Preventing the Jury from Hearing Inadmissible Evidence. To the extent practicable, the court must conduct the proceedings in a jury trial so that inadmissible evidence is not suggested to the jury by any means
(d) Plain error. Nothing in this rule precludes taking notice of plain errors affecting substantial rights although they were not brought to the attention of the court	(e) Taking Notice of Plain Error. A court may take notice of a plain error affecting a substantial right, even if the claim of error was not properly preserved.

Rule 104. Preliminary Questions	Rule 104 — Preliminary Questions
(a) Questions of admissibility generally. Preliminary questions concerning the qualification of a person to be a witness, the existence of a privilege, or the admissibility of evidence shall be determined by the court, subject to the provisions of subdivision (b). In making its determination it is not bound by the rules of evidence except those with respect to privileges.	(a) In General. The court must decide any preliminary question about whether a witness is qualified, a privilege exists, or evidence is admissible. In so deciding, the court is not bound by evidence rules, except those on privilege.
(b) Relevancy conditioned on fact. When the relevancy of evidence depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court shall admit it upon, or subject to, the introduction of evidence sufficient to support a finding of the fulfillment of the condition.	(b) Relevancy That Depends on a Fact. When the relevancy of evidence depends on fulfilling a factual condition, the court may admit it on, or subject to, the introduction of evidence sufficient to support a finding that the condition is fulfilled.
(c) Hearing of jury. Hearings on the admissibility of confessions shall in all cases be conducted out of the hearing of the jury. Hearings on other preliminary matters shall be so conducted when the interests of justice require, or when an accused is a witness and so requests.	(c) Matters That the Jury Must Not Hear. A hearing on a preliminary question must be conducted outside the jury's hearing if <ol style="list-style-type: none"> (1) the hearing involves the admissibility of a confession, (2) a defendant in a criminal case is a witness and requests that the jury not be present, or (3) justice so requires.
(d) Testimony by accused. The accused does not, by testifying upon a preliminary matter, become subject to cross-examination as to other issues in the case.	(d) Testimony by a Defendant in a Criminal Case. By testifying on a preliminary question, a defendant in a criminal case does not become subject to cross-examination on other issues in the case.
(e) Weight and credibility. This rule does not limit the right of a party to introduce before the jury evidence relevant to weight or credibility.	(e) Evidence Relevant to Weight and Credibility. This rule does not limit a party's right to introduce before the jury evidence that is relevant to the weight or credibility of other evidence.

Rule 105. Limited Admissibility	Rule 105 — Limiting Evidence That Is Not Admissible Against Other Parties or for Other Purposes
When evidence which is admissible as to one party or for one purpose but not admissible as to another party or for another purpose is admitted, the court, upon request, shall restrict the evidence to its proper scope and instruct the jury accordingly	If the court admits evidence that is admissible against a party or for a purpose — but not against another party or for another purpose — the court, on request, must restrict the evidence to its proper scope and instruct the jury accordingly

Rule 106. Remainder of or Related Writings or Recorded Statements	Rule 106 — Rest of or Related Writings or Recorded Statements
When a writing or recorded statement or part thereof is introduced by a party, an adverse party may require the introduction at that time of any other part or any other writing or recorded statement which ought in fairness to be considered contemporaneously with it	If a party introduces all or part of a writing or recorded statement, an adverse party may require the introduction, at that time, of any other part — or any other writing or recorded statement — that should in fairness be considered at the same time. Rule 404. Character Evidence Not Admissible to Prove Conduct; Exceptions; Other Crimes

Rule 404 — Character Evidence; Crimes or Other Acts

(a) Character evidence generally. Evidence of a person's character or a trait of character is not admissible for the purpose of proving action in conformity therewith on a particular occasion, except

(1) Character of accused. In a criminal case, evidence of a pertinent trait of character offered by an accused, or by the prosecution to rebut the same, or if evidence of a trait of character of the alleged victim of the crime is offered by an accused and admitted under Rule 404(a)(2), evidence of the same trait of character of the accused offered by the prosecution,

(2) Character of alleged victim. In a criminal case, and subject to the limitations imposed by Rule 412, evidence of a pertinent trait of character of the alleged victim of the crime offered by an accused, or by the prosecution to rebut the same, or evidence of a character trait of peacefulness of the alleged victim offered by the prosecution in a homicide case to rebut evidence that the alleged victim was the first aggressor,

(3) Character of witness. Evidence of the character of a witness, as provided in Rules 607, 608, and 609

(a) Character Evidence.

(1) Prohibited Uses. Evidence of a person's character or character trait is not admissible to prove that on a particular occasion the person acted in accordance with the character or trait

(2) Exceptions in a Criminal Case. The following exceptions apply in a criminal case

(A) a defendant may offer evidence of the defendant's pertinent trait, and if the evidence is admitted, the prosecutor may offer evidence to rebut it,

(B) subject to the limitations in Rule 412, a defendant may offer evidence of an alleged crime victim's pertinent trait, and if the evidence is admitted, the prosecutor may

(i) offer evidence to rebut it, and

(ii) offer evidence of the defendant's same trait, and

(C) in a homicide case, the prosecutor may offer evidence of the alleged victim's trait of peacefulness to rebut evidence that the victim was the first aggressor

(3) Exceptions for a Witness. Evidence of a witness's character may be admitted under Rules 607, 608 and 609

(b) Other crimes, wrongs, or acts. Evidence of other crimes, wrongs, or acts is not admissible to prove the character of a person in order to show action in conformity therewith. It may, however, be admissible for other purposes, such as proof of motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident, provided that upon request by the accused, the prosecution in a criminal case shall provide reasonable notice in advance of trial, or during trial if the court excuses pretrial notice on good cause shown, of the general nature of any such evidence it intends to introduce at trial.	(b) Crimes or Other Acts. (1) Prohibited Uses. Evidence of a crime or other act is not admissible to prove a person's character in order to show that on a particular occasion the person acted in accordance with the character. (2) Permitted Uses²; Notice. This evidence may be admissible³ for another purpose, such as proving motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, absence of mistake, or lack of accident. On request by a defendant in a criminal case, the prosecutor must (A) provide reasonable notice of the general nature of any such evidence that the prosecutor intends to offer at trial, and (B) do so before trial — or during trial if the court, for good cause, excuses lack of pretrial notice.

² Style Subcommittee comment. The Advisory Committee changed this from Exceptions. The heading is now not parallel with 404(a)(2) & (3), 408(b), 410(b), and 412(b). Notice the consistent pattern that we have tried to use: the heading to one subpart says Prohibited Uses, and the heading to the following subpart says Exceptions. We believe that the heading should probably be changed back. For now, this could be added to the list of global issues.

³ Style Subcommittee comment. The Style Subcommittee believes that it's critically important to be consistent in phrasing the court's discretionary authority to admit evidence. See the footnote to Rule 407. In nine other places, the rules now use the court may admit: 407, 408(b), 411, 412(b)(1), 412(b)(2)(twice), 413(a), 414(a), and 415(a). The Advisory Committee concluded that may be admissible is substantive in 404(b)(2), but we think that decision should be reconsidered.

Professor Capra comment. A majority of the Advisory Committee determined that "may be admissible" is substantive and had to be retained for the following reasons: 1) hundreds of cases have established that Rule 404(b) is a rule of "admissibility" and not exclusion, so any change to the language that could even be conceived as changing or narrowing the existing language threatens this uniform case law, 2) Congress carefully considered this language, revising the original Advisory Committee draft, which had provided that the rule "does not exclude" bad act evidence if offered for a proper purpose. Congress made the change to place "greater emphasis on admissibility." The Committee was reluctant to change the language carefully chosen by Congress, 3) the change was opposed by the Justice Department, as signaling a less generous approach to bad act evidence, and 4) the language of Rule 404(b), as vetted and cited in so many cases, is a "sacred phrase" and therefore substantive under the restyling protocol.

Rule 405. Methods of Proving Character	Rule 405 — Methods of Proving Character
(a) Reputation or opinion. In all cases in which evidence of character or a trait of character of a person is admissible, proof may be made by testimony as to reputation or by testimony in the form of an opinion. On cross-examination, inquiry is allowable into relevant specific instances of conduct.	(a) By Reputation or Opinion. When evidence of a person's character or character trait is admissible, it may be proved by testimony about the person's reputation or by opinion testimony. On cross-examination, the court may allow an inquiry into relevant specific instances of the person's conduct.
(b) Specific instances of conduct. In cases in which character or a trait of character of a person is an essential element of a charge, claim, or defense, proof may also be made of specific instances of that person's conduct.	(b) By Specific Instances of Conduct. When a person's character or character trait is an essential element of a charge, claim, or defense, the character or trait may also be proved by relevant specific instances of the person's conduct.

Rule 406. Habit; Routine Practice	Rule 406 — Habit; Routine Practice
Evidence of the habit of a person or of the routine practice of an organization, whether corroborated or not and regardless of the presence of eyewitnesses, is relevant to prove that the conduct of the person or organization on a particular occasion was in conformity with the habit or routine practice	Evidence of a person's habit or an organization's routine practice is relevant to prove that on a particular occasion the person or organization acted in accordance with the habit or routine practice. This evidence is relevant regardless of whether it is corroborated or whether there was an eyewitness

Rule 407. Subsequent Remedial Measures	Rule 407 — Subsequent Remedial Measures
When, after an injury or harm allegedly caused by an event, measures are taken that, if taken previously, would have made the injury or harm less likely to occur, evidence of the subsequent measures is not admissible to prove negligence, culpable conduct, a defect in a product, a defect in a product's design, or a need for a warning or instruction. This rule does not require the exclusion of evidence of subsequent measures when offered for another purpose, such as proving ownership, control, or feasibility of precautionary measures, if controverted, or impeachment.	When measures are taken that would have made an earlier injury or harm less likely to occur, evidence of the subsequent measures is not admissible to prove <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • negligence, • culpable conduct, • a defect in a product or its design, or • a need for a warning or instruction But the court may admit this evidence⁴ for another purpose, such as impeachment or — if disputed — proving ownership, control, or the feasibility of precautionary measures.

⁴ Style Subcommittee comment. In the previous draft, this read this evidence may be admitted. The Advisory Committee decided that that language did not involve a substantive change. Nevertheless, the Advisory Committee preferred the court may admit this evidence, and we have made that change in this rule and in 408(b), 411, 412(b)(1) & (2), 413(a), 414(a), and 415(a). The court may admit is preferable to the court need not exclude for these reasons:

- It avoids the double negative (not exclude)
- It offers a positive contrast to the negative force of (b)(1)
- It achieves the same result in practice. We don't see any semantic difference between the two. The longer one is just the negative version of the court may admit.
- The two most important words in our work are may and must — the so-called words of authority. We have to be consistent in how we use them, without creating various ways of expressing what the court is permitted to do. We want the evidence rules to be internally consistent, and we want them to be consistent with all the other restylings, which use may to create permission.
- If we use may and must consistently in the evidence rules, it will be highly implausible for anyone to read may admit as must admit.
- Rules 101–415 use the court may five times — in 103(c), 201(b), 201(c)(1), 403, and 405. Note 403 in particular. The court may exclude relevant evidence if. That can't be read as The court must.

Professor Capra comment. There is an argument that the change from "This rule does not require exclusion" to "The court may admit" is substantive because it changes the rule from one of exclusion to one providing a positive grant of admissibility. It is at least a change in tone that may give an unintended signal to practitioners. The Evidence Rules Committee voted, however, that the change was not substantive. But the Committee unanimously voted to suggest to the Style Subcommittee that the original language — "This rule does not require exclusion" — be retained.
